Tue tragedy in Winglok Street on Thursday evening has led to a strict enforcement of the Regulation of Chinese Ordinance, 1888. This Ordinance provides for system of surveillance over the Chinese in the interests of peace and good order. It is a very important Ordinance, and, if atrictly enforced, would have a strongly deterrent effect upon priminals and would operate effectually for the protection of life and property throughout the Colony. Under Section 30, No Chinese, without reasonable excuse, the proof of which and may be expected here on or about shall lie with him, shall be at large within the City of Victoria between 9 p.m. and sunrise without a valid pass, and the thirty-first section obliges Chinese abroad during the night to carry light. For infringements of the Ordinance in these and other provisions, severe penalties may be imposed. Within the past three years, the Ordinance, so far as it relates to lights and night passes, has those in higher office, the police have made few arrests during that period, and even when an officer was animated by unusual zeal to apprehend a rogue or vagabond, wan-Mating : - Voluntary, Andantino, Hopkins; dering about the city without pass, without Venite Ouseley; Paalms, Jones, Le- a light, and often in possession of I that weapons the punishment inflicted at the Anthem, I am Alpha and Omega; Magistracy has been so trivial that the men thought their efforts to protect life and property were not appreciated, and to all intents and purposes abandoned the arrest of many a wait not able to give a salisfacreatur, Goss; Anthem, Thus saith tory account of himself. There was a belief that the Chinese were becoming more amenable to our laws, and it was on the strength of this belief that the police chiefly relaxed their supervision of the Chinese population. In the interests of the law-abiding Chinese it is comforting to know that the police have received orders to renew the old restrictions, and the result of the first night's application of these orders was the arrest of forty or fifty rogues and vagapasses, and sampan-people under weigh in He failed to appear. That if your wire be correct, that this event took place on the 21st, it emphasizes what you have already stated about the outling of telegraphic lines, and about the bottling up proponsities of the Japanese authorities.

That assuming, for the cake of argument, this definite news will not be again contridioted-(and I don't think it will, for the events preceding point to the probability of its truth)-one can look at the future with a little clearer light.

That it has already been stated, with what tenth po one can say, Japan would consent to talk about terms of peace only after the fill of Port Arthur.

That Port Arthur may be regarded as the gate of the Pechili Gulf, and its possession would furnish an excellent base for further operations against China, as well as an admirable guarantee for the fulfilment of any conditions agreed upon by the wily Celestial. That a fortress and arsenal which cost China marly a hundred million dollars to establish, and which was apparently regirded as quite sufficient to protect the Empire all round, is undoubtedly a grand trump-card for Japan to hold in the game of diplomacy which may now be at once

That China will attempt to play this game by means of shifty shuffling and all the arts for which she is famous, there is not the slighest doubt. That her endeavours to open negotiations through third parties are, in my opinion, mere shifts to save the 'face' of the High Officials concerned.

That the reported expedition of Mr Detring to Japan comes as a kind of caricature of the other unacceptable efforts, and Japan would be very foolish were she to listen to invthing which does not come direct from the Emperor of China, and unless it is fathered or personally presented by one of the highest in the Empire.

That although it is certain the Chinese will seek in every way to minimise the humiliation inseparable from the act of suing for peace, it is equally certain they will discover the difference, at the ontset, between dealing with Orientals K. W. Mounsey, b Travers and Occidentals. That it is true the peculiar waysof the Chi- C. M. Firth, b Powell...... nee' are better known now in the West P. G. That it may be argued, and it has been pro- Darby phesied, that Chine will henceforth reform Hooper herself, and in course of time become a Firth power before which the Far East and the world at large will tremble.

That my impression is, China will never Mast 13.3 in our time become a military or naval Smith..... power of any consequence, because offi- Travers cial honesty must precede proper organi- Clarke sation, and even official honesty cannot Taylor be secured for many years to come. Powell

THE COMMISSION OF THE GODS ON THE MUNDANE DEPRESSION. At last Jupiter became weary of the perpetual complaints which ascended to his throne from the mortals below, and called a meeting of the gods to consider the question. He explained to the assembly that life was to him a misery, and that comething must be done to stop the discontent and suffering which plainly existed in the world. He then inquired of Ceres if she was the cause of the trouble.

"Oh no," said she, "I am sure I have been very bountiful, in fact, I have heard hints that I was overdoing it, so I am trying the experiment of damaging the Corn crop to see if that will do any good." Then the Thunderer, addressing Vulcan, asked him if he had been holding back the precious metals as he had done once before. . how it works. At this point there ontered a messenger from flades, with a despatch from a mortal said that the inhabitants of the world were mostly fools; that he had heard of the object of the council of the gods, and that if the great one would send a commission to earth to investigate the matter, he would find that

Then White said: That some people said it was the currency, and he admitted that the burrency had great influence upon the affairs of men, but that it was more philosophical to ignore this influence because it was renondite; that the witnesses who had been previously heard had given reasons plainly on the surface, which ought therefore to be accompled. That over-production was the cann of the depression, plainly evidenced by Mesers Woodward's circular, that the ava-Isnobe of Indian Wheat might be dispharged from a tempot according to appearances.

One Patterson said he was very well entirfied with things as they were; that he made a very good living by selling what he hadn't got, and buying it back at less money. A. E. Redwood, who described himself as a cotton merchant, said that the cause of the trouble was that the rulers of the leading countries had prohibited the use of silver in payment of debts, and that, therefore, debts were very hard to cay. Meroury wanted to know what made the rulers do that. B. Adams explained that it had been done mainly by the advice and ineligation of Lord Overstone, son of the founder of the London and Westminster Bank, who succeeded in proving to Lord Liverpool and Sir Robert Peel at the beginning of the century that by contracting the currency its value was increased, and therefore that oreditors would be enabled to absorb the property of debtors and the profits of industry.

Mercury said that evidently the first move must be the formation of an elected government, as such a law would be impossible under a government of that kind. It was explained to him, however, that we already had a representative government. Mercury wanted to know how the law had worked. B. Adams said that it had disastrous consequences from the first, that prices fell 24 per cent, in three years, and in another three years things had culminated in a paulo and a run on the Bank of England-this was in 1825. The bank was saved by an 9 trogression I caused by that mistake, and issue of five millions of paper money. He stated that prices continued to fall, and that distress was rampent till a general crush took place in August, 1847. The merchants of London in a body petitioned for the re-

Then when the Germans invaded Italy none were found to attempt resistance.

Brokers and merchants of all trades also testified to the fact that prices were constantly declining, and that while this went on they could not make a living. Dr Giffen said it was all wrong to suppose that a curtailment of the currency caused lower prices, that it was the other way tailment of the currency. Mercury said that a Mr Atkinson had been mentioned, and he was accordingly called, and deponed that he was a citizen of Boston, U.S. A. Curtram Burrie said that the deares Ratinitaki said he was a native of Hindostan, where silver was used; that if his country had not been cursed by European rulers who had first lent their gold and then doubled its value, they would be doing very well that the whites had further recently stopped the coining of their silver, with the result of stopping Indian exports, to the benefit of Japan and China. At this, Jing-a-ling, from Pekin, gave a triumphant sweep with his pig-tail, and said the westerners had been too clever, and he would get the best of it; that he was now sending cotton to Liverpool; that silver had not gone down as some said; that prices were just the same in his country as they were twenty years ago.

Mr Smith said that all the leading countries of the world had followed England's example in prohibiting the use of silver since 1878, and he couldn't understand how anyone could imagine that this could hanpen without enhancing gold, and subtly causing a redistribution of property, amounting to a revolution. Mr Pierce said he was an owner of gold but what was the use of talking of appreciation of gold when he couldn't make anvthing out of it. He daren't lend it to anyone because he knew everyope was losing money, and he couldn't invest it anywhere. Mercury suggested that the restoration of eilver should be tried, but the hisses which greated him convinced him that the majority was opposed to this. Mercury then detailed the evidence at great length to the council of the gods, and summed up by saying that the only cause for general depression which he could find was that the mortals insisted on making their currency scarce and hard to get though they all had great need of it for the payment of huge debts, and were striving tremity.

MOTORIM SHT-HAOL SERVASE A SELECTION OF A FINANCIER IN NEW YORK CITY. New York. October 20. - Fumirari Siras, a Tokyo millionaire merchant, strolled through the corridors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel to-night. His mission to New York is said to be a most important one, namely, to make the preliminary arrangements for the floating of a Japanese loan in this

Mr Siras was surprised when the reporter asked him if his mission were not to secure a Japanese loan, and at first denied it unequivocally, but he finally made the llowing statement:

'I am in New York on a business errand. is true I saw a number of New York bankers to day and received assurances from them that if Japan needed it and would pay a good rate of interest they would buy a few million of our Government bonds. I am not here officially to negotiate a loan for my Government. What I have already done and shall do is merely preliminary. Our finances are in a good shape and unless the war is long drawn out we shall be able to raise all the money we want at home.

'Are you going to buy any munitions of war while here?"

"If I were going to, I would not tel you; but I can say frankly, I am not. The only purchase of war materials made ontside of Japan was made in San Francisco lest month. It is in Yokohama by this time, and it consists of 200 tons of lead. We shall probably need some more."

You may have heard says 'Woomers' in the Australasian, of that exact Scotch boy who when reproved for catching fish on the MHINESE SCHOOL-BOOKS: to European officials in service of China Another fisher, who wasn't a boy and wisn't Scotch, was up the river early last Sunday morning, having a bad attack of the trout fever which is now epidemic in the city. As he was leaving the river with a well-filled creek he met his reverence strolling along the bank. Is it here you are, Dinny, he said severely, instead of being at mass this morning? Faith, you'll have to do penance for this. 'Ob, that's bad for both of us, said the angle; for when I was leavin' the river now I sed to myself, "Shure'n this'll be a lovely four-pounder to send over to the presbyters for his riverence's breakfast to-morrow morning ," and now, sooin it's caught of a Sunday, I suppose you won't take it. An shure, your niverence, it's only the Sunday I have for fishin'. Och, sure, you might be doing worse then that, Dinny, avick, said the holy father. DO THOU LIKEWISE. When one sets a candle in a window on a dark night he never can tell how many lost and bewildered travellers it may guide on their way. I once know a dear old lady who habitually did it on every dark night. The road that passed her house was always forsaken and lonesome enough, and houses were far apart. So, on the general principle of goodwill to men, she placed her candle in a sort of projecting window, where it would shine both ways and do the most good. She is doed and gone now, but let us hope that

My legs trembled and shook under mo, so I could not walk out. Indeed, it was as much as I could do to get across the floor. A dry, backing cough set in and shook me very much, and I lost a deal of sleep.

"As I grew weaker I was confined to my bed more and more, and my daughter was obliged to take my place in doing the housework. A doctor attended me for over a year. following notice of the China Review; The present publication, judging by the number now before us, is intended to occupy a position, as regards Chira and the neighbouring countries, some what similar to that which has been filled in India by the Calcutta Review. The great degree of attention that has been bestowed of late years upon the investigation of Chinese literature. antiquities, and social developments, to say nothing of linguistic studies, has led to the accumulation of important stores of informaation, rendering some such channel of publicity as is now provided extremely desirable; and contributions of much interest may fairly be looked or from the members of the oreign consular services, the Chinese Customs corps, and the missionary body, among whom a high degree of Chinese scholarship is now assiduously cultivated and who are severally represented in the first number of the Review by papers highly creditable to their respective authors Some translations from Chinese novels and plays are marked by both accuracy and freshcentury, Su Tung-p'o, by Mr. E. C. Bowra, is not only historically valuable, but is also distinguished by its literary grace. Beside notices of new books relating to China axid the East, which will be a useful feature of the Review, if carried out with punctuality and detail, we are glad to notice that Notes and Queries are destined to find a place in its pages also. It is to be hoped that this opening for contributions on Ohinese subjects may croke a similar degree of literary seal to that which was displayed during the lifetime of its predemay receive the support necessary to insure its continuance.
